Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part I: Topic and Structure

- The topic is a complex idea, not an obvious, overly simple thought.

1

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part I: Topic and Structure

- The topic is a complex idea, not an obvious, overly simple thought.

- Ideas, concepts, and information are organized so that each new element builds on what came before it. The result is a text with unity and focus.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part I: Topic and Structure

- The topic is a complex idea, not an obvious, overly simple thought.

- Ideas, concepts, and information are organized so that each new element builds on what came before it. The result is a text with unity and focus.

- Where appropriate, text formatting such as headings, graphics such as charts and tables, and multimedia are included.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part I: Topic and Structure

- The topic is a complex idea, not an obvious, overly simple thought.

- Ideas, concepts, and information are organized so that each new element builds on what came before it. The result is a text with unity and focus.

- Where appropriate, text formatting such as headings, graphics such as charts and tables, and multimedia are included.

- A concluding statement or section follows logically from the information or explanation presented and supports that topic clearly. It may provide insight into the importance of the topic.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part II: Topic Development

- The topic is thoroughly developed, not glossed over.

Part II: Topic Development

- The topic is thoroughly developed, not glossed over.

- Only the most relevant and significant facts are used to support and develop the topic.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part II: Topic Development

- The topic is thoroughly developed, not glossed over.

- Only the most relevant and significant facts are used to support and develop the topic.

- Where appropriate, extended definitions, concrete details, quotations, and examples add further support to the topic.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part II: Topic Development

- The topic is thoroughly developed, not glossed over.

- Only the most relevant and significant facts are used to support and develop the topic.

- Where appropriate, extended definitions, concrete details, quotations, and examples add further support to the topic.

- The supporting details are appropriate to the reader's knowledge about the topic.

Part III: Transitions and Flow

- Appropriate and varied transitions and word choice link major sections of the text.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part III: Transitions and Flow

- Appropriate and varied transitions and word choice link major sections of the text.

- Transitions create cohesion, the sense that everything belongs together and is ordered logically.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part III: Transitions and Flow

- Appropriate and varied transitions and word choice link major sections of the text.

- Transitions create cohesion, the sense that everything belongs together and is ordered logically.

- Transitions clarify the relationships among the complex ideas and concepts that support the topic.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part IV: Effective Language and Tone

- The language is precise, not overly general.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part IV: Effective Language and Tone

- The language is precise, not overly general.

- Where needed, vocabulary terms relevant to the topic are introduced and defined if necessary.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part IV: Effective Language and Tone

- The language is precise, not overly general.

- Where needed, vocabulary terms relevant to the topic are introduced and defined if necessary.

- Figures of speech such as metaphors, similes, and analogies may be used to express subtle and complex thoughts.

Rubric for Explanatory Writing

Part IV: Effective Language and Tone

- The language is precise, not overly general.

- Where needed, vocabulary terms relevant to the topic are introduced and defined if necessary.

- Figures of speech such as metaphors, similes, and analogies may be used to express subtle and complex thoughts.

- The text is written in a formal style and objective tone.